Police Unearth Stock Swindle

Bangos are Charged With Embezzling $450,000 From Victims—Promised To Buy American T and T Stock.

New York, March 27.—An ingenious scheme through which at least a dozen business men are alleged to have been swindled out of $450,000 was revealed today through the arrest of a "girl Ponzi" and her husband, a clerk.

The prisoners, charged with embezzlement and obtaining money under false pretenses, are Charles W. Bange, 26, and his dark-eyed girl wife, Mrs. Grace Ott Bange. They were arrested on the complaint of William J. Clark, Mrs. Bange's brother-in-law, who said he had given Mrs. Bange $24,700 for stock but had received instead a batch of receipts.

Mrs. Bange, whose husband earns $40 a week as a clerk in the Standard Oil Company, told police that by assuring her victims she could buy American Telephone & Telegraph Company stock at par, she had accumulated a fortune in four years, by investing Clark's money and borrowing more, she said she pyramided her capital up to $100,000 during the first year.

Mrs. Bange said she had less than $1,000 left of her money, having lived sumptuously for the past ten years, travelling abroad and spending lavishly. Detectives doubted this statement, however, and planned to search her safe-deposit box today.

Mrs. Bange was employed as an accountant by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company for more than four years. As an employe of the company, she told prospective victims that she could persuade employes to sell their stock, which they had obtained at from ten to twenty points below the market price.

"Mrs. Bange, instead of turning over certificates of stock to those who bought them from her, induced them to buy more stock with a promise of big profits," Police Lieutenant Mayer explained. "She said that when dividends on the stock fell due she would sell more stock or make her victims think they were buying more, and with the money thus obtained she would pay the dividends due."

HAVING A GLORIOUS TIME SAYS MRS. STILLMAN

Paris, March 27.—Aglow with happiness, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Stillman returned from the Riviera to Paris today.

"We are having a glorious time," Mrs. Stillman said. "At first we thought we would commit a psychoanalyst, believing that only through the aid of one could we find lasting content. We have found each other unaided so that now I do not think we have need of psychoanalysis."

The couple will leave for London tomorrow and after a month's stay return to the United States, to take up residence at Pleasantville, N. Y.

Nunn, has opened an office at 778 Broadway and he would be glad to have you call at the office or a telephone call to number 1170 will bring him to your home where he can give you an estimate of what work will cost.

Drys Opposed To a Referendum

Washington, March 27.—The congressional wet drive for a national referendum in 1928 on modification of the American Prohibition Law struck a snag today when dry leaders announced they would oppose it.

In the face of this opposition, however, the wets laid plans to project not only the referendum as an issue but the whole question of prohibition modification into the 1928 campaign, in which a president, the entire membership of the House and one-third of the Senate will be elected. Senator Edge, (R.) of New Jersey, who sponsored a resolution authorizing the referendum, declared he would lead a fight to carry these issues to the people.

The drys are dead against the proposed refrendum. Two of the prohibitionists leading spokesmen—Senator Sheppard, (D.) of Texas, co-author of the Volstead Act, and Senator Willis, (R.) of Ohio—announced they would oppose Edge's proposal. It was their contention that the biennial elections, all of which have resulted in the election of dry congresses, have furnished a sufficient referendum on the dry question.

WOULD FEED PUPILS DURING SCHOOL HOURS

Albany, March 27.—New York State school children would be given milk, soups and other nourishing food during school hours at the expense of the state, if a bill introduced in the legislature today by Senator Burchill, (R.), of New York city, becomes law.

In some communities at present milk is supplied pupils through private funds, but the law does not permit school authorities to spend one cent in this direction, Senator Burchill said.

"The building of the body is just as important as the training of the intellect," said Burchill. "The time has not only arrived but has long since passed when some aid must be given by the state where it is needed."

HENRY FORD BUYS AN ANTIQUATED STAGE COACH.

Boston, March 27.—Henry Ford has annexed another antique. This time it is a four horsepower affair—not a flivver.

The latest acquisition to his treasures is the antiquated stage coach owned by the Northboro Historical Society, which plied on the highways in the days when the Wayside Inn was the Ritz Carlton of New England.

School Salary Report Adopted

Teaching Staff Re-employed With Increment Provided Under Salary Schedule—Schools Hard Hit by Sickness—Other Matters.

The city schools have been hard hit by the recent wave of sickness which has been passing through the various schools of the city. Included in the sickness is the grip epidemic and the measle and chickenpox epidemic. On the closing day of school prior to the Easter vacation there were absent from the city schools, including the high school, a total of 641 students. The absentees were not confined to any one section of the city but the various diseases apparently are widely spread. It is expected that the Easter vacation period will act as a check and that when schools re-open the peak will have been passed. Those absent from the city schools last Thursday, according to figures of the school board, were:

No. 1, 5 students.
No. 2, 77 students.
No. 3, 56 students.
No. 4, 52 students.
No. 5, 61 students.
No. 6, 83 students.
No. 7, 83 students.
No. 8, 117 students.
High school, 87 students.

A Full Attendance.

The meeting of the board of education was attended by every member of the board Friday evening in the high school, a thing which has rarely happened in the past several years.

A communication was read from Kingston Post, No. 150, American Legion, thanking the board for the use of the high school auditorium on February 22.

The Athletic Association was granted the use of the high school auditorium for a dance on the evening of April 30.

Permission was also given the Misses Mildred and Marion Messinger to use the auditorium on the evening of April 13 for a concert, the proceeds to be devoted to the building fund of the Kingston City Hospital. The permission was granted on motion of Trustee Hayes.

Trustee Fowler for the finance committee offered the pay roll for March amounting to $26,993.23 and also bills for the month.

Replacement Values.

Trustee Beeres of the building committee reported that since the last meeting the committee had conferred with William McCullough, mason contractor and builder, in regard to having a survey made of the city schools with the purpose of having an accurate survey made to determine the present replacement values of the school buildings. He reported that Mr. McCullough had estimated that it would cost about $200 each for the surveys on grade schools. On the high school he had made a survey and had rendered his report to the committee. The report stated that the replacement cost of the high school would be $375,336.97 in 1926.

The purpose of the survey was to determine the proper amount of insurance to carry on school property. Trustee Beeres reported that the board could carry 80% co-insurance on the property at a great saving. At present the board carries $300,000 on the building at a cost of $16 a thousand for three years. This is about 80% of the replacement value of the building. He reported that by carrying 80% co-insurance on the present value of the building the same result would be attained and at a cost of $4.50 a thousand for three years.

Trustee Van Wagonen moved that the report of Mr. McCullough be received and placed on file and also that the building committee proceed no further with the matter of having a survey made of the grade schools without the further sanction of the board. Carried.

Approve Co-Insurance Plan.

Trustee Beeres moved the board insure the high school under the 80% co-insurance plan. The motion was carried, Trustee Van Wagonen voting "no" on the motion.

Trustee Betz for the supplies committee offered a resolution authorizing the committee to proceed with the soliciting of bids for general supplies, text books and library books for the coming year. Carried.

Trustee Betz also offered a resolution authorizing the supplies committee to buy coal for the coming year. Carried.

The matter of having the lawn at the high school attended to was brought to the attention of the board by Superintendent Michael. Ashes have been used and the lawn now needs other fertilizers and seed to re-seed spots which have frozen out. On motion of Trustee Hayes the superintendent was authorized to have the matter taken care of.

The purchase of 14 kitchen chairs for boys of the part time school at No. 8 and 12 tablet arm chairs for use in the high school was also referred to the superintendent with power by motion of Trustee Beeres.

Mr. Michael stated that the doors of the school buildings were mopped with disinfectants during the present epidemic and each room was aired twice during each period in an effort to keep down the sickness.

The board then went into executive session and discussed the teachers' salary question. The following resolution was offered by the Teachers' committee and adopted:

Adopts Salary Schedule.

"Your teachers' committee respectfully recommends that all teachers, supervisors, principals, medical inspector, nurses and superintendent, superintendent's secretary and bookkeeper, training school principals, clerks and attendance officers be reemployed for the next school year beginning August 1, 1926, at salaries set opposite the names of each in annexed list.

"This gives to each teacher in said list, the increment provided by your salary schedule, with the exception of grammar school principals and superintendent, for each of whom the list provides a double increment. The education law requires no schedules for medical inspector, nurses, attendance officers, high school principal's clerk, bookkeepers and secretary.

On motion the recommendations made in the report of the committee were approved as follows. This provides for the salaries as recommended in the schedule as adopted last year by the board with the added increments granted by law.

Kingston City Hospital Will Open in April

New Part of Hospital That Was Damaged by Water and Smoke Will be Ready for Occupancy About April 10—New Building Entirely Fireproof.

Workmen are busy getting the new part of the Kingston City Hospital ready for hospital purposes early in April. This new addition to the hospital built several years ago is entirely fireproof and during the fire that damaged the old portion of the hospital was filled with smoke and water.

It was expected to have the hospital ready for hospital purposes by April 1, but it will be about April 10, or a trifle later before the work of renovation is completed.

Steps have been built from the ground to the second floor of the new building for fire escape purposes.

When the new addition was built to the hospital proper several years ago, it was made entirely fireproof. This new addition has a capacity of sixty beds.

While the Kingston City Hospital is being made ready for use again patients for the hospital are being cared for at the Benedictine Hospital, where two floors had been turned over to the city hospital at the time of the fire.

Miss Emily Smith Denies Rumor

That Her Engagement To Major Warner of State Troopers Will be Announced at Easter Time.

Albany, N. Y., March 27.—Albany society today was discussing a report that Emily Smith, eldest daughter of Governor and Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, and Major John A. Warner, superintendent of the New York State Constabulary, would announce their engagement at Easter time.

The governor's daughter was much disturbed when questioned concerning the report.

"There is absolutely nothing to it," she said, with much emphasis, "I do not see why anyone should get excited about rumors."

Major Warner was equally disturbed about the report.

"I cannot say anything about it," he said. "I hope the report is not published because it would be very embarrassing."

The governor's daughter and the head of the state police are very good friends and have been seen together a great deal of late. They attended the session of the legislature last Monday night and have been together frequently at social functions.

Major Warner, whose home is in Rochester, was appointed superintendent of the State Troopers by Governor Smith to succeed Major George F. Chandler, of Kingston. At that time Major Warner was captain of one of the troops.

Measles Epidemic Subsiding Here

The epidemic of measles which has been sweeping over Kingston is on the wane and so far this month 145 cases have been reported to the board of health. All of the cases are said to have originated from one unreported case.

Appeal Glasco School Matter

The action brought by Antonio Serra to restrain the Trustees of School District No 9, Glasco, Town of Saugerties, from proceeding to issue school bonds upon the district for $100,000 for a new school house, which action has been contested by the trustees and upon the first hearing before Supreme Court Justice Hasbrouck upon motion to continue the injunction restraining the trustees Judge Hasbrouck held that the court had jurisdiction to hear and determine the matter and continue the injunction. The trustees then made a motion before Supreme Court Justice Rosch at Special Term to dismiss the complaint upon the ground that the court did not have jurisdiction and the matter should have been taken up by appeal to the Commissioner of Education upon this motion Judge Rosch dismissed the complaint.

This action is brought by the plaintiff to restrain the trustees from proceeding to sell school bonds for $100,000 claiming that the special meetings at which the appropriation was made were illegally called and without proper notice thereof to the qualified voters of the district. In support of the plaintiff's allegations in his complaint 131 qualified voters and taxpayers of the school district have filed an affidavit stating that they are opposed to the appropriation of $100,000 for new school, but are willing to expend $40,000 on improvements to the present school building, which they believe is sufficient for such improvements; and appeal will now be taken to the Appellate Division by the plaintiff.

Benjamin Rowe of Saugerties for the plaintiff, and Van Etten & Cook of Kingston appears for the School Trustees in this action.

The warrant was issued on a sealed indictment found by the grand jury which reported Friday at the court house. Jacob is charged with the same offense as his brother, that of maintaining a disorderly house and a public nuisance.

George Ennist on Friday entered a plea of not guilty to the charge as found in the grand jury indictment, and it is expected that Jacob will enter a similar plea when arraigned.

Search Cleveland For Gem Bandits

Believe Cleveland Was Headquarters For Whittemore Bandit Band—Whittemore's Confession May Not Be Needed.

New York, March 27.—The scene of the investigation into the activities of the Whittemore bandit band shifted to Cleveland today.

Baltimore and New York city detectives were reported en route to the Ohio city as a result of the statement of Mrs. Edna Condon Unkelbach, wife of "Baltimore Willie," one of the members of the gang held here, that "Cleveland was the real headquarters."

Mrs. Unkelbach, taken into custody at Baltimore last night, was understood to have given detectives there the names of two members of the gang not yet caught. It is believed that they may be in Cleveland.

District Attorney Banton today was planning again to question Joseph Trop, the former convict taken into custody yesterday as a result of the confession of Unkelbach that Trop was one of the "fences." Trop, who claimed to be a jeweler, admitted to police that his office was "under his hat." He stoutly denied that he had purchased any stolen jewelry from the Whittemore gang but police believed he may give them valuable information.

Trop led detectives to his safety deposit vault where $20,000 worth of jewelry was found. Trop claimed he had purchased it at the jewelers' exchange.

Banton also planned to talk with Whittemore again today. The bandit leader has promised to give the names of all the "fences" known to the gang providing that the authorities release his wife.

Officials hinted that Trop's arrest may result in revelations that will make Whittemore's confession useless. The district attorney has made it plain that Whittemor's confession will not save his wife unless he frankly gives up every bit of information he possesses.

Close Schools In Schenectady

Twenty-five per cent of the 18,000 workers in the General Electric plant are suffering with grip, according to Dr. G. D. Smith, in charge of the company's hospital.

Upwards of 100 of the 600 students at Union College are victims of grip.

Cambridge Again Wins Boat Race

Putney-on-Thames, March 27.—Cambridge, despite the fact that it was outweighed by its brawny opponents, won the seventy-eighth annual boat race with Oxford today.

The light blue oarsmen started the race as slight favorite, but finished five lengths ahead of the Oxonians at Mortlake, despite the final efforts of Oxford to spurt at the finish and ward off the second defeat in two years.

Cambridge covered the course in 19 minutes 29 seconds, which was one minute and 22 seconds slower that the record time, held by an Oxford crew.

The English flapper was out en-masse, and thoroughly pro-Cambridge to a lip-stick.

JOHNSON STARTS TO SING, MELEE FOLLOWS.

Albany, N. Y., March 27.—Three men were stabbed, two seriously, during a free-for-all fight in a dance hall here early today. A riot call was turned in and police arrested eight men and three women for questioning in connection with the stabbing.

The melee took place in a dance hall and soft drink parlor at 137 Hamilton street. Police said fifteen men and women took part in the fracas.

The wounded men are: Tony Camera, proprietor of the dance hall, who suffered a serious wound in the head; Patrick McCabe, 20, slashed in the back, and Jack "Iron Man" Johnson, youthful, minor slashes on the left side of the head.

Camera and McCabe were taken to Memorial Hospital.

The disturbance is reported to have started when "Abie" Johnson, a brother of Jack Johnson, started to sing. He told police he walked to the center of the hall and began to sing when the proprietor protested and the general fight followed.

Patrolman Michael McMahon, one of the ten policemen who responded to the riot call, suffered serious head injuries as he was assisting in taking the witnesses to headquarters. He fell off of the patrol wagon as he was standing on the running board guarding the prisoners.

WANT ADS PAY

Naples Loses Rascals and Pep

Everything Bad Charged to War and Everything Good Credited to Mussolini—But in the Older Streets Dirt and "Color" Still Live—A Visit to Pompeii.

Naples, Italy, March 8, 1926.

There is an old proverb that says: "He who has not seen Naples, has not seen Italy." To deny that is no disparagement of Naples or of Italy—but it seems to me quite untrue, and I feel that even more on this my second visit. Very gay, very crowded, more prosperous than ever before, full of shipping, full of tourists, full of military—cosmopolitan—a world port, but not of the essential Italy, as Sicily is, or as the cities of the farther North are Italy. Street singers still sing under our windows, with their "Funiculae-funicula" or "Santa Lucia!" to a twanging guitar, fishing boats spread their nets every morning near the sea-wall across the street, and Capri and Ischia rise faintly blue across the Bay of Naples, but somehow the place seems to be pervaded by tourist agencies, and rival steamship companies. Ladies from Michigan and men from Montana rub elbows with English clergymen and Germans with pockets full of money and the shops are alive with them, all bargaining for gloves and corals, tortoise shell and spurious antiques.

Whatever goes wrong in Naples—as when the electric light goes out nearly every night, or the plumbing breaks down, or the streets stag dug up for months, they tell you is due to "post-war conditions" soon to be righted, and whatever is better—such as the care of the poor, the removal of beggars from the street, the introduction of heat in hotels, the stopping of thieving at the landing stagings, the regulation of taxis, we owe "to our beloved Mussolini!" No doubt they are right, no doubt this is a cleaner and safer city to live in than it was twenty years ago, but some one has taken the pep out of Naples, and one might as well go walking on Fifth avenue or the Bowery! Sometimes I regret the old itme rascals in their picturesque rags and ingratiating ways.

But if you will go along the Via Roma—one of the longest and most wonderful streets in the world, until you come to the old part of the city, things will be happening quite as of old, and if you escape the hubs of the carts, the crowding motor-bus, or the honking taxi and the hawkers' donkey carts, and turn into any of the old streets that are mere slits of sky between tall houses, you will find yourself back again in a past where reformers are powerless to impose the new civilization on these cave dwellers! Clothes hang gaily across the street high in air, old women roast chestnuts over braziers in door ways, every article known to the life of men can be bought on the side walk, and letter writers sit ready to indite love notes or due bills. One street yesterday was choked from curb to curb by societies with silk banners waiting to take part in a funeral. The body was to be carried down from a sky tenement, the gaudy hearse was waiting, and a band with crowds to follow was ready. The true Neapolitan may live in squalor, but on Sundays he walks with the noblest along the sea promenade in the sun, and when he dies he gets all the pomp there is going, as far as the grave!

We have had a good many drives, and had all the proper thrills out of volcanoes. Vesuvius had been growing like a cross dog of late, and at intervals tossing up great clouds of rose and sulphur colored smoke. When we went for our day at Pompeii it had a special activity on for our benefit, and it made stunning back grounds for our pictures of the new excavations. One whole new street has been ungarthed, and the decorations on the walls of peculiar beauty. A complete dye house was most interesting with the vats and all the process revealed. Along the shop fronts were scrawls of red writing on the walls. An election was in progress, and the shop keepers had written "Give your valued suffrages to Vulpanius Appolonius is the advice of the owner of this ship!"

The great Forum, with its law courts, the temples, the public buildings all about, and the statues and columns were most impesing, and gave one a glimpse of the splendor and dignity of that old Pompeiian life, as did the great theatre, the baths, the gymnasium and the wonderful villas, but that little human touch—it might have been Ulster county in the excitement of an election for supervisors—my heart warmed in understanding sympathy with the candidate!

Then there was one of the newly dug up villas—a beauty! In the house was the dining hall—triclinium—and on three sides of the center was a wide couch of marble, on which, of course, the cushions were, so that the guests reclined with heads toward the center, where the feast was served to them in turn. But the table was so interesting! At the head of the hall was a place like a shrine, out which water poured down in a cascade, into a marble runway. When the feast was on, a slab of marble was placed over it, and the slaves waited in the middle. On the wall entwined in lovely decorations were these inscriptions in Latin:

"Do not forget to wash the hands before feasting."

"Do not forget to keep undefiled the streets of our fair city."

"Do not forget not to stare at the ladies of others!"

And the gardens! They were all lovely and filled with beautiful marbles and benches and carvings. In one of the newly uncovered ones was found a long row of the amphorae or wine jars embedded in the soft earth of the garden just as they had been put two thousand years ago. And there they sit yet! In all of these houses and shops and gardens were found priceless treasures which were carefully taken away to museums for safe-keeping, jewels, marbles, coin, glass, statuary. The richest city—after Rome—of the Roman Empire, with its luxurious life, its baths, its amusements, its splendor of adornment—chariots racing through the streets (where the ruts still are) shops filled with rich stuffs, priests sacrificing to the gods—an election going on—and then in the twinkling of an eye—the black clouds of ashes descending—the pall spread over—and it was no more!

Something of that feeling of futility in this land of volcanoes—"the dancing land," as our guide calls it, we got at the Little Vesuvius, or Solfatara, which is the place where the whole top of a mountain just casually, and without warning, in the year 1180—I think it was—blew up in smoke and dust, and then subsided to the great crater which still boils and bubbles and steams evil gasses in spots. You look over into a lake of boiling, growling mud, black, like tar, and of the most evil stench. Then they tell you that in a month it may cease there, and open up anywhere—maybe where you stand! A little further up the valley an old man who lives in a tiny hut there, pronounces incantation, waves a great wisp of broom, wherever his wand goes spring of jets of hot steamy sulphuric gas. It was very interesting, but I was not sorry to be riding again past the almonds in bloom, and over bits of the Appian Way, and round by Pozzuoli and the sea.

We passed the Lake of Averous on the way home, where the entrance to Hell was supposed to be, and Lake Lucrinus where the Emperor Nero had his mother thrown in when she got inconveniently curious about his affairs, and another place—a cavern in the hillside where the heat of sulphur gas is so great as to be almost unbearable. Out of doors was so far to be preferred to these so-called "resorts" that we declined to be shown any more, and contended ourselves with the pleasant associations. As for instance the old church where Pergolese was the music master, and wrote his Stabat Mater.

Tea at Bertolinis, on the great hill above Naples, is not very good tea, to my mind, but it takes the taste of ugly history and evil things out of your mouth, and nothing could be more wonderful than the view of the Bay of Naples from that terrace on top of a mountain. Get your table set near the rail, where you can lean a little and look down four hundred feet on the city, crawling along down there, keep the tourists and their chatter behind you. Sip a little, think a little, and then not at all—and if you have luck, the pageant of centuries of history of which that matchless bay was the theatre will unfold itself on the rosy mist that the setting sun reflects back on Vesuvius.

TRADE MARK REG.

By Junius

Unfair and colder is the way we would designate in these days.

Folks will often give three cheers for something for which they wouldn't give anything else.

A highly disappointed man
Is Hezekiah Hobbs;
Whenever he would get a shave,
The girls are getting bobs.

Ned—He plays a fair golf game, doesn't he?
Ted—Yes, if you watch him.

Love makes the world go around, without enough sleep.

A rubber band is unlike a Scotchman in that it gives.

A quick finish. If to another world you'd like to pass you'll get a chance if you step on the gas.

Consider the unhappy ostrich, who bit his tonsils trying to follow the swallow.

"I'll be hanged if I do," said the thug, as he considered pulling the trigger during a hold-up.

The war department does not furnish chairs for the standing army.

In deep dismay, the woodpecker wept,
As the shades of evening stole.
He had pecked and pecked and pecked all day,
At a concrete telegraph pole.

To the pure all things are pure, but to the simple all things are complicated.

The strongest propensity of a woman's nature is to want to know everything that is going on and the second is to boss the job.

"There was a big fire at the post office last night."

"My girl must have sent me another letter."

It is pretty hard for a criminal to hide behind a woman's skirt these days.

They have perfected an auto now that can be operated by radio.

What a boon that will be to those "come arm" drivers!

Virtue may be its own reward, but the cook who slays gets no comic-paper publicity.

Some women are happy. Others marry men who drink, or gamble, or fool around with radios.

"They think I'm drunk," hiccoughed the movie photographer, as he reeled away.

CUTTING OUT THE ELECTRICAL INTERFERENCE

By-Pass Condensers and Shielding Will Help.

F. M. RUSSELL.

There are many localities where it seems impossible to get reception free from interference from power lines, street cars, motor generators, etc. This interference may be powerful enough to ruin reception from even the local station, if not altogether, at least for long periods.

Naturally before you can cure trouble you must locate the cause. If you live in a large apartment building where an oil burner is used, it may be that the motor used to operate the blower is causing your trouble. This is generally caused by sparking at the commutator brushes. If the commutator is rough it should be smoothed with a piece of sandpaper and the brushes set correctly. It will help very considerably if you connect a large by-pass condenser across the brushes. You do not need to be afraid that this will do any harm, in fact it will be an advantage for it will help stop the sparking that normally occurs and will increase the brushes and commutator.

Sometimes you get a hum that cannot be eliminated. If your house or apartment is wired for D. C. current try the effect of putting a large by-pass condenser across the line at the main switch. Disconnect the ground wire from the receiver. If you now find the interference has disappeared you can be fairly sure that the interference is coming in over the ground wire and one possible remedy is to try the effect of using a counterpoise instead of a ground wire. To do this run a length of aerial wire around the picture moulding of as many rooms as is necessary to give you the same length of wire you are now using in your aerial.

Paltz Visited By a Big Fire

The three story brick building formerly the Johnson garage on South Chestnut street, New Paltz, and recently taken over by the Central Hudson Gas and Electric Company, was totally demolished by fire which broke out at 6:15 o'clock this morning. The building was heated by an oil burner and it was stated that it is believed the fire started from the furnace.

The building was used by the electric company to repair its cars on the two upper floors and the lower floor was used for storage purposes. On the second floor was also the living apartments of one of the company's mechanics named Short, who formerly lived in Kingston. Mr. Short lost all of his household goods in the fire.

By the time the New Paltz fire department reached the building the entire interior was a roaring mass of flames. The roof fell in and carried with it the two upper floors. The fire was finally brought under control about 10 o'clock. Only the outer walls of the building are standing.

The loss by fire was not ascertained.

The many friends and associates of Herman Shader will hold him in loving remembrance for his kindliness of heart, his thoughtfulness of others, his quiet humor and his loyalty to friends and duty.

The following words will find a response in the hearts of all who knew him:

I cannot say and I will not say
That he is dead, he is just away!
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand,
He has wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair,
It needs must be, since he lingers there.
And you—oh you, who the wildest yearn
For the old-time step and the glad return,
Think of him faring on, as dear,
In the love of there, as the love of here.
Think of him still as the same, I say.
He is not dead—he is just away.

Financial and Commercial

New York, March 27.—Lower values were recorded for the bulk of active utility and specialty stocks in an irregular market today. After a firm opening, in which the oils and motor stocks sold fractionally higher, selling was resumed in the public utility specialty stocks which displayed such weakness yesterday, the latter including the baking stocks, radio shares, general asphalt, Fleischmanns and Kresge.

Bearish traders continued their policy of "picking out the weak spots" for concentrated selling. Stocks of companies whose recent earnings' reports for 1925 were not up to expectations received special attention from the bearish contingent. With persistent hammering, General Asphalt fell away from 67 to 61 in the first half hour, while Columbia Gas, North American and other utility stocks duplicated the low prices reached in yesterday's slump.

Week-end business reports emphasized the continuous decline in wholesale commodity prices which reached the lowest levels in ten weeks. The effect has been to discourage and to restrict forward buying of commodities used in the retail trade, according to Dun's and Bradstreet's. Woolworth dropped six points to 154 1/2, in the lead of a general decline in Mercantile stocks.

Selling spread to all sections of the market in the second hour, and prices again inclined sharply downward. Ward Baking broke to 30 1/2 for a new loss of three points; Baldwin again broke below par, and new losses of from one to five points were scored in the bulk of active industrial stocks, which received little or no organized support. United States Steel and General Electric displayed a very weak tone and sold at or near the year's lowest prices. Stocks of the mercantile companies poured out in enormous volume in this period, and values melted as quickly as at any previous session of the year to date.

Renewal of professional selling and liquidation of Pan American B sent that stock down to 63 for a new low for the movement, but the bulk of independent oil stocks were steady and inactive. The railroad shares also remained under cover while heavy selling was in progress, though some of the southwestern merger stocks were in demand at a higher range of values. The copper stocks also remained inactive.

Anti-Medical Propaganda Fraud

State Health Commissioner Nicoll Discusses the Way in Which Half Truths Are Used by Propagandists to Discredit Medical Profession.

The fraud of anti-medical propaganda was discussed by the state commissioner of health, Dr. Matthias Nicoll, Jr., in a radio talk broadcast Friday night from Station WGY, Schenectady.

In answer to the question frequently asked as to why the State Department of Health does not make an effort to combat the misinformation given to the public by various organizations and individuals opposed to vaccination and to the administration of toxin-antitoxin to prevent diphtheria, Dr. Nicoll said that he had been advised recently to fight fire with fire, but his reply was: "The truth is not in these people and I could not descend to their level in controverting fact. I would be as much handicapped as a man wearing eight-ounce boxing gloves and fighting according to Marquis of Queensbury rules would be if he engaged in a fight with a man who fought under bar-room rules and used brass knuckles, teeth and feet."

"Some of you," said Dr. Nicoll, "may have heard of the atheist who in a public lecture on his pet topic said that the Scriptures themselves state 'there is no God.' He gave as his reference the 14th Psalm. Many in the audience took his statement as fact but a few skeptics looked up the reference and, this is what they found: 'The fool hath said in his heart there is no God.'

Tell Only Half Truths.

"My object tonight is not to talk religion but to caution you against giving serious consideration to the arguments of some of our 'anti-medical' friends who oppose vaccination to prevent smallpox and the administration of toxin-antitoxin to prevent diphtheria. Many of their arguments contain about the same amount of truth as the statement of the atheist to which I have referred. For example, a certain group recently broadcast over New York state a statement to the effect that in Fargo, North Dakota, a judge had granted an injunction prohibiting the health and school authorities from carrying on diphtheria immunization with toxin-antitoxin. That much of their statement was true, but the whole truth was that the self-same judge a few days later vacated the injunction. Did this group of persons, claiming to be interested in community health, mention the subsequent proceeding? They did not. Such an admission would have ruined their story completely. Truth means nothing to many of these people. Facts are twisted to suit their own particular objectives. If one could supply them with a motto it would have to be: 'The end justifies the means.'

Whole Truth Would Be Worthless.

"A few years ago a child in this state had lockjaw. He had been vaccinated a few days previously. This tragedy was played up by the 'antis' for all it was worth as a horrible example of the results of vaccination. What were the real facts? The child lived near a livery stable and played there most of the time; it is in horse manure that the germ causing lockjaw is found oftenest. So instead of the vaccination being responsible for the tetanus in this child, it was the contamination of the wound with manure. The disease would have occurred had he had any other sort of a scratch or break in the skin subjected to the same contamination. The unfortunate feature of such an accident is that a case of lockjaw is rare and therefore is 'news' which interests everyone who hears or reads of it, while the fact that millions of people have been saved from smallpox is a matter of such common knowledge that it does not constitute news. When Charles A. Dana was editor of the Sun a cub reporter brought to him a story about a dog biting a man. Dana killed the story as not being news and told the reporter if he'd bring in a story of a man biting a dog that would be news and it would be published. So it is with these stories of ill-effects following vaccination or immunization. No matter how remote and far-fetched the relation of cause and effect, they make good newspaper copy, while oftentimes if the whole truth were told there would be nothing startling in the story and therefore it would be worthless copy.

Linking Cause With Effect.

"You have probably heard some of your misguided friends say: 'Well, even if there is no immediate danger from these preventive inoculations, they cause trouble later in life.' This is bosh pure and simple. It reminds me of the man who was asked why he didn't believe in vaccination. His reply was that his own child was vaccinated and subsequently fell out of a window and died a week later.

"Some one once said: 'Figures don't lie but liars can figure.' When you read accounts of the terrible things which result from vaccination and toxin-antitoxin prevention against diphtheria, consider well the source from which they come."

More Fame for the Bean

If all the baked beans, canned and in cases, were piled case upon case they would make nine piles each, equal in size to the Washington monument. Beans produced in the United States for a single season would make this possible, according to statisticians in the Department of Agriculture.

Round Earth Old Theory

A volume unearthed from a library in Oxford university entitled "The Metrical Lives of the Saints," written by a monk at the end of the Thirteenth century, contains the stanza "As an appel the urthe is round, so that evermo half the urthe the sonne bi-schyneth, hou so hit evere be."

Made Love in a Library

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

LESTER PORTER had been graduated from college—a fact, said his friends, that indicated that the faculty of Baldwin university were getting rather lenient or that Lester had been very lucky.

Then by some odd turn of events Lester got a job on the editorial staff of a popular magazine—but still he never read, at least any more than he had to. And the editor-in-chief one day remarked to his first assistant, well out of Lester's hearing, that it was a mortal shame that Lester did not have a better education.

"Oh, I know he's been to college," said the editorial leader. "But what does that signify? The trouble is, Lester needs literary seasoning. He's really clever, perhaps brilliant, but his manner and his writing give the impression of a man who's never read. Too bad, because he will hardly do here in the editorial offices. We'll try to get him switched over to the business department."

Then it happened one day when Lester Porter had business in the section of the old town where stretched out the buildings and campus of his alma mater, that a really heavy rainstorm overtook him. And being only a short way from the old college library Lester ran thither for shelter. Perhaps there would be a current magazine of a frothy nature that would serve to while away ten minutes or so. He would ask where they kept the current magazines. And the girl he asked happened to be Lorna Crane, youngest of all the young librarians employed in the college library— youngest and decidedly the prettiest. Even so, Lorna was not stunningly pretty.

"There are no magazines in this section," she told Lester when he asked his question. "And I think you have to have a special permit to read them. Otherwise the students would be at them all the time. Is there something else that you would like—some reference book?"

"Why, yes," said Lester. "I might browse around awhile if you have no objection." And he smiled to himself at the very thought of himself ever "browsing" in any library.

Lester stayed in the library an hour and a half that afternoon. And the longer he stayed the more sure he was that this girl with whom he had been talking possessed all the qualities needed to the making of his ideal woman. She was just the build, just the figure, of exactly the coloring. Everything from the tone of her voice to the way she walked suited him entirely. Truth to say, he did little browsing.

He came back three or four days later at about the same time in the late afternoon, and seeing that the girl of his ideals was on duty Lester sat down and began to read a book that some previous reader had left out. It was an essay on English literary style by a writer of whom Lester had never even heard. Despite his frequent glancing up to see whether his ideal was still not far off Lester found himself becoming much interested in what this writer had to say. Really not half bad—this sitting in a library and reading books that he had always considered dry as bones.

Again and again Lester came, always primarily to see the girl but eventually in good measure to go on with some book that had taken his attention on some previous visit.

Then somehow Lester managed to get courage to ask this girl if she would sometimes have tea with him when she could leave the library a little early. And from that it wasn't very hard to ask her if he might call. She turned out to be the daughter of a professor—old Professor Crane in the history department, whom Lester had once regarded as a first-rate fossil. And from meeting Mrs. Crane and shaking hands with Professor Crane, it was not so very hard to ask Lorna to go to the theater with him and to manage to dance with her at a little club he knew about afterwards.

"What's got into you?" asked his editorial chief one day when Lester was trying to concentrate on a bit of editorial work before him. "You don't spend so much time at the office as you used to but the time you do spend here you use to ten times as good advantage. This review you've just handed in and that editorial you wrote last week—why, man, they're corking! Not just clever—your things were always that—but scholarly."

Lester was trying to stammer out some sort of reply, but the editor went right on.

"I was thinking of getting you transferred over to the business department," he said, "but since you've been doing so well here, I think you'd do better to stay with us. I think I'll promote you to Stanley's place—as my first assistant. He's taking a year off and probably won't ever come back. That means, of course, about double the check you are now getting."

Lester stammered his thanks.

"You see I'm especially glad," he said, "because I have just become engaged to Miss Lorna Crane, Professor Crane's daughter, you know—and now we won't have to put off the wedding."

"So that's it," commented the editor-in-chief. "Well, you're not the first man to whom romance served as a tonic."

Hold Veteran on Ancient Charge

Asbury Park, N. J., March 27.—On a forty-five-year old charge, Dr. Edwin Pye Turner Rowe Osbaldeston, 93, veteran of the crimean war and one of Asbury Park's most respected citizens, spent last night in the city jail. The charge was preferred by Deputy Sheriff Foster Black, aged 91 of Binghamton, N. Y. who alleged Dr. Osbaldeston stole a horse and broke jail there in 1881.

Black said he recently saw a picture of Dr. Osbaldeston in a newspaper and recognized him as the man indicted in Binghamton forty-five years ago.

Dr. Osbaldeston was arraigned before City Judge Louis Tunen today and was released in the custody of his lawyer to await extradition to Binghamton to face the ancient charge. In tears, Dr. Osbaldeston denied the allegation.

J. Lyle Kinmouth, local editor, telegraphed to Governor A. Harry Moore asking that he refuse to permit extradition, saying that "even a short time in jail would mean death to this sterling citizen."

Dr. Osbaldeston was the leader of an expedition into the Australian Bushlands to seek a lost party of explorers. He was a practising physician before old age incapacitated him.

$14,000,000,000 Yearly For Autos Our Bill From Biggest U. S. Industry

IT costs the population of the United States $14,000,000,000 a year to indulge its preference for rubber-tired self propelled vehicles, it was reported by the Bureau of Industrial Technology, after a survey of data accumulated by the Bureau, by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, by the Motors and Accessories Manufacturers' Association, by associations of tire producers, insurance companies, labor organizations, gasoline and oil distributors.

The survey reveals that the automotive industry has firmly established itself as the leading industry in the United States. The nation's annual retail investment in automobiles is greater than the total value of our farm crops. It is more than twice as great as our total annual investment in the construction of new buildings.

"Production of automobiles now proceeds at the rate of 4,000,000 a year," the Bureau of Industrial Technology reports. "The average retail value, with accessories, is $1,000 per car. Not all of this represents American investment, however, for the value of automobiles we export in a year has mounted to $250,000,000."

The last annual registration of automobiles was approximately 20,000,000. The Bureau of Industrial Technology concludes that it costs the average automobile owner somewhat over $700 a year to own and operate his car. But if each man, woman and child in the nation would help pay the bill, the annual pro rata assessment would be $117.

"The development of this great industry has brought correspondingly important traffic problems," the Bureau reports. "Every city is grappling with parking plans designed to relieve street and highway congestion and eliminate accidents. The widening of thoroughfares, the establishment of public garages and parking spaces, and the introduction of signal towers are among the means being employed.

"Various local rules and regulations have been put into effect, many of which have been so ineffectual as to bring forth much humorous comment. One of these bits of comedy relief is the famous set of parking regulations suggested by Harry Daniel to the effect that only blue-eyed drivers should be permitted to park in the mornings and only black-eyed drivers in the afternoons.

"'If a blue-eyed driver gets a black eye before 1 p. m. he should have the privilege of coming back in the afternoon for another one,' according to Mr. Daniel, and 'any driver who gets a pair of black and blue eyes in the regular discharge of his duties has the right to park some place else the next time.'

"One of the countless direct results of the great development of the automobile industry is the enormous road-building program now in progress in this country, calling for the expenditure of about $1,000,000,000 a year, to say nothing of the enormous upbuilding of all suburban communities.

"In many American cities suburban construction is larger than in the urban district itself. This development is looked upon as the direct result of the automobile and makes this invention probably the most important factor, both from an economic and social standpoint, in modern life."

FLORIDA AND THE RIVIERA.

It seems that Florida has drawing attractions that are causing the French Riviera to be impotently envious, although for generations the latter has been regarded as the garden winter spot of the world. When thirty-odd years ago Marie Bashkirtseff so often prayed in her diary to be permitted to go to Nice, nobody dreamed that a time would come when Florida would be named instead in such petitions. South Florida's climate has just received an unintentional advertisement that is likely to be worth more than the gaudy rhetoric of a thousand real estate agents. It seems that the last two seasons in the French Riviera have been very poor ones in a business way, and even the late Lenglen-Wills tennis matches have not greatly helped. So the unhappy hotel keepers there, suspecting that their difficulties were due to the growing fame of Florida, sent a trusted agent to find out just what are the special charms of the American winter resort.

He found for one thing that in south Florida there is warmth and sea bathing throughout the season, which is not true of the Riviera although otherwise so charming. The rich in Europe as well as in America do not like the relatively cold days and the imperfect heating facilities on the southern shore of France, and they have been gripped by the lure of South Florida, where sea water is always warm and the sun renders heating facilities unnecessary. And so, as it is a matter of climate, and the rich positively refuse to be chilly even occasionally, there would seem to be nothing to be done about it, even by the most inventive and enterprising of mortals.

BIG AMERICANS WANTED.

"There was nothing about him of the small American," said President Coolidge of George Washington, thus coining a new phrase which provides a standard by which we may measure public men and policies. Coolidge paid this tribute to the breadth of Washington's mind:

"No man clung more tenaciously to what he believed was right, or was prepared to make greater sacrifices in its support. Be he viewed the right as a universal principle to be applied not only to himself, but to others, not only to his own state, but to the nation, not only to his own countrymen, but to foreigners."

He set a straight and narrow standard for our statesmen who feel inclined to exploit national or international problems for their personal aggrandizement, and thus brand themselves as "small Americans."

Too many of us seek laws for the special privilege and enrichment of our own states or sections of the country, lacking capacity to see that the greatness of Our Country arises from the common interest of all its people.

Washington stands as the greatest American, because he renounced the glory of a kingly crown to build a free republic on principles so sound and broad that we can stand before the world as an example for other nations, and help the world establish higher ideals for all humanity whenever there is opportunity.

Certain English trades agitators have urged the adoption of Soviet ideas as the salvation of the English laborer. With a far clearer and more rational vision, Premier Baldwin urges the trades unions to come to America and study labor conditions. Labor in Russia is at the absolute bottom of the social, financial, moral and political scale—that is all labor but the organized military oligarchy. Premier Baldwin knows this fact, and to him Russia is a terrible model. But he sees in America the best paid, the most prosperous, the most independent, the best-living workman in the history of the world. He would have his countrymen take lessons from the best, instead of the worst.

The Albany, Oregon, Chamber of Commerce has sent a memorial to Congress, asking for the dismissal of unnecessary federal employes, hangovers in useless jobs originated during or since the war. It urges that such jobs be wiped off the payroll and that the President be given power to dismiss every superfluous board and commission that clutters up the country and devours tax money. The tendency in federalization is toward political jobs that are piled upon the people, not to serve, but to receive. Political business costs too much and returns too little.

SUGAR TREATMENT FOR FITS.

When Dr. Banting was investigating the nature of insulin, he found that if a considerable quantity was used there would be convulsions in the experimental animals. If a small quantity were given, there would be very slight convulsions or perhaps none whatever. The convulsions were due to the lessening of the sugar in the blood. A Russian research man noticed during a great scarcity of sugar in Russia, that there was a great increase in the number of cases of epilepsy or fits. Thereupon he tried the "sugar treatment" in epileptics who had this sugar deficiency in the blood. In eighteen cases the seizures became rarer and milder, in five they appeared only once in from four to six months, where before the treatment they averaged from one a day to at least one a week. This was a most striking reduction in the attacks.

The idea behind this sugar treatment is that as it is the lack of sugar in the blood that irritates the nervous centres and causes the convulsions, therefore the administration of sugar should prevent them. It was indeed a fortunate circumstance that this research man in Russia, noticing the effect of the lessened sugar in the animals in causing convulsions, should immediately see the wonderful possibilities of sugar in the treatment of the convulsive movements of epilepsy. The treatment used by the Russian physician was to give by the mouth glucose dissolved in water with lemon juice, or to give the straight sugar itself in doses of five or six tablespoonsful three times a day. Now sugar is perhaps our richest food for the body, and considering its heat value, the cheapest food that you can buy.

As a source of energy, and to prevent fatigue it has perhaps no equal. But where little physical effort is made, sugar will increase the body weight in rapid fashion.

We will wait with interest more reports upon the use of sugar in these convulsive conditions, like epilepsy.

ST. JAMES MEN'S CLUB SUPPER MONDAY NIGHT

Next Monday evening the Men's Club of the St. James Church will hold its annual supper. This has always proven to be a popular affair for the men of St. James and their guests. A large attendance is expected when the diners sit down at 6:30 in the dining room of the church.

As in former years, one of the distinctive features will be a real "he-man" meal of eats, prepared by men, served by men and also eaten by the masculines. The preparation of the "eats" is in the hands of Mr. Young who has made himself famous in such capacities.

Music will be liberally dispensed by Prof. C. R. Spaulding's church orchestra.

Dr. George F. Chandler will give his highly interesting talk on the recent crime wave. He will be introduced by Prof. M. J. Michael, the guest of honor of the evening.

Harry Clearwater, soloist, and the Lacey Boys' Quartet will add musical numbers to the program.

Fred Van Deusen will do mysterious sleight of hand performances and all attendants are hereby cautioned to keep one hand on pocketbook and one on their watch. The arranging of the program has been in the hands of Percy Jones who has worked hard to give the men an evening of real entertainment.

HOW

DISTANCES MAY BE TOLD BY THE ORDINARY MAN.—If you devote your Saturdays to golfing, shooting, or taking photographs, you have, in all probability, met the problem of judging distances.

Bear in mind these few simple rules, and your difficulty will be lessened. With the naked eyes, if you have average sight, you can see the whites of people's eyes at 30 yards; at 80 yards you can just see their eyes.

When all parts of their body are distinguishable, they are 100 yards away; when the outlines of their faces are just visible, the distance is 200 yards; and when a face appears as a "separate dot, you should be 400 yards away, says London Tit-Bits.

Six hundred yards away a group of people can be distinguished singly; but at a farther distance than this no detail of the human form can be determined. Yet at 1,200 yards you should be able to tell a man on horseback from a man on foot; at 2,000 yards he is simply a dot on the landscape.

The majority of people, too, are unable to determine the wind's velocity. When the smoke from a chimney moves in a straight, vertical column, it means that a one or two-miles-an-hour breeze is blowing. A three-miles-an-hour wind will just stir the leaves on the trees.

Twenty-five miles an hour will sway the trunks; at 40 the small branches will break and it takes a mile-a-minute gale to snap the trunks of big trees.

How Butterscotch Got Its Distinctive Name

Butterscotch seems to have grown in public favor recently, for now, in addition to the old-fashioned butterscotch candy, there are pies, soft drinks, ice cream and many other things made with this flavor.

It seems that butterscotch was not of Scotch origin, as the word is a colloquialism meaning "to scorch." And that is just what butterscotch candy is—candy that has been scorched. In the commercial manufacture of butterscotch a great deal of care must be taken to see that the burning process does not leave the candy with any taste except that which one expects to characterize the flavor. The cooking is done by gas, and each pot contains a thermometer and stirring rod. The batch of candy must be stirred properly and the correct temperature maintained at all times. In order to do this, gas is used, as with this fuel delicate temperature control is secured.

How Pearls Are Tested

A new process for distinguishing between natural and cultured pearls was described before the French academy recently.

The method, very simple and inexpensive, requires the inserting of a miniature tube in the hole bored in the pearl for beading purposes. Within the tube are two little mirrors very close together, at right angles to each other and at an angle of 45 degrees with the sides of the tube.

When a light is thrown into the tube on the first mirror it is reflected on the second mirror if the pearl is composed of concentric layers, as is the case with all natural pearls. If the core of the pearl is not composed of concentric spheres the ray of light instead of striking the second mirror shines through the substance of which the cultivated pearl is made and appears as a tiny spot of light on the surface.

How Whales Are Warned

The simplest and most constant sound in Nature, the washing of the sea, serves as a radio beacon to warn whales, porpoises, and many fishes to keep away from the shore and below the surface in rough weather.

According to Dr. Austin Clark, formerly naturalist on the scientific ship Albatross, "The simple breaking of the waves is of immense importance to sea creatures as an index of the dangers they are running. In times of storm the repellent sound increases, and by this they are warned to keep farther from the shore and farther down beneath the surface."

How to Tell Tree's Age

The forest service says that one of the chief ways of ascertaining the age of a tree is by counting the whorls of the branches. In some species the whorls are more noticeable than in others, particularly in the Eastern white pine you will note for each year the tree puts out a whorl of branches. It has been possible to stand off and count anywhere from 2 to 75 years in this manner. The whorls come out regularly and leave clear spaces between each year. It is not possible to tell the age so well in broadleaf trees.

How Denver Got Name

Denver is named for Gen. James W. Denver, who lived from 1817 to 1892 and was the first territorial governor of Kansas. Colorado was originally included within the Kansas territory, and Denver is said to have been the one who first suggested the name of "Colorado when that region was set apart. He had been a California commissioner, and then commissioner of Indian affairs and served during the Civil war in the Union army.

But Wait a Few Years

Today's Story in New York History

By Frederic A. Godcharles.

(Copyright, 1926, by the Author)

French and Indians Attack Fort Bull and Put Garrison to Sword, March 27, 1756.

At an early period in the English occupation of New York the colonists became acquainted with the wonderful natural channel of navigation that extended through the present Oneida county, and which, with a short and easy portage, connected the Mohawk river with the great lakes and the fertile regions of the west.

Near the commencement of the eighteenth century, plans were proposed for improving this route and for fortifying the most important points upon it. The portage at Rome, from the Mohawk river to Wood creek, became a place of the first importance, and it was occupied as early as 1725; and a fortification known as Fort Williams was built upon the Mohawk, and soon after another known as Fort Bull was built upon Wood creek, both on the line between Albany and Oswego.

On March 27, 1756, Fort Bull was surprised by a party of French and Indians, who had penetrated through an interior route from La Presentation (Ogdensburg) on the St. Lawrence, by an exhausting march of fifteen days, two days of which they were out of provisions.

The French and Indians were under command of M. DeLery, who left a journal of his expedition which is complete in the details of the attack.

They arrived at the carrying place about five o'clock in the morning, when the scouts captured two Englishmen coming from the fort. Under threats they stated that Fort Bull was garrisoned by sixty soldiers, under command of Lieutenant Bull; that there was a considerable quantity of munitions of war and provisions in the fort; that it was constructed of heavy pickets, fifteen to eighteen feet above ground, doubled inside to a man's height, and was nearly of the shape of a star; that it had no cannon, but a number of grenades, which Colonel William Johnson had sent on intelligence being communicated to him by the Indians that the French were marching toward the place; that fifteen bateaux were to leave in the evening for Oswego; and that at the moment sleighs were arriving with nine bateaux loads. These prisoners also told the French commander that Fort Williams was much larger, mounted four cannons, and was garrisoned by 150 men, under command of Captain Williams.

At ten o'clock the savages captured ten men, who were conducting the sleighs, loaded with provisions. These confirmed what the prisoners had stated, and added that one hundred men had arrived the preceding evening and that a larger force was on their way.

M. DeLery was busily engaged in distributing the provisions in the sleighs when he was informed that a Negro, who had accompanied the sleighs, had escaped, taking the road to Fort Williams. Whereupon M. DeLery, believing that the garrison at Fort Williams would be expecting an attack, he immediately determined to attack Fort Bull.

Each officer was ordered to form his brigade, but when DeLery informed the Indians of his plans to attack Fort Bull, they told him they had enough English meat, without costing a man, and if he desired to perish, he was the master only of his Frenchmen.

The commander asked them for only two Indians to guide his expedition, which they had difficulty in granting. But by the generous use of brandy about twenty followed DeLery, and some others guarded the road and the twelve prisoners.

It was expected to make a bayonet attack, but the savages began a war whoop and the attempt was made to take the fort by storm. A demand made upon the commander to surrender, which was answered by a fire of musketry and the hurling of grenades.

The gate was cut down, when the French rushed into the fort and put everyone to the sword they could find. One woman and four soldiers were fortunate enough to escape the fury of the besiegers. The only prisoner taken on this occasion was Robert Eastburn, who was carried to a town called Oswegatchy. He wrote a narrative of his captivity and deliverance.

The alarm of this attack was carried to Fort Williams, four miles distant, and a force hastily sent to relieve Fort Bull, but arrived too late to render assistance. The enemy, after wasting the stores and foodstuffs, retired with their provisions and plundered toward the Black river. Oswego was besieged by the French during the summer, and was surrendered August 14.

Alarmed at the success of the French, and greatly in fear of his personal safety, Colonel Charles Webb, then commanding on the Mohawk, destroyed Forts Williams and Craven, and hastily retreated down the valley to Albany, leaving the frontiers to the mercy of the savages; and the sequel is written in blood in the annals of the Upper Mohawk Valley.

Nutty Natural History

By HUGH HEATON.

THE CEYLONESE TRAMOUNTE.

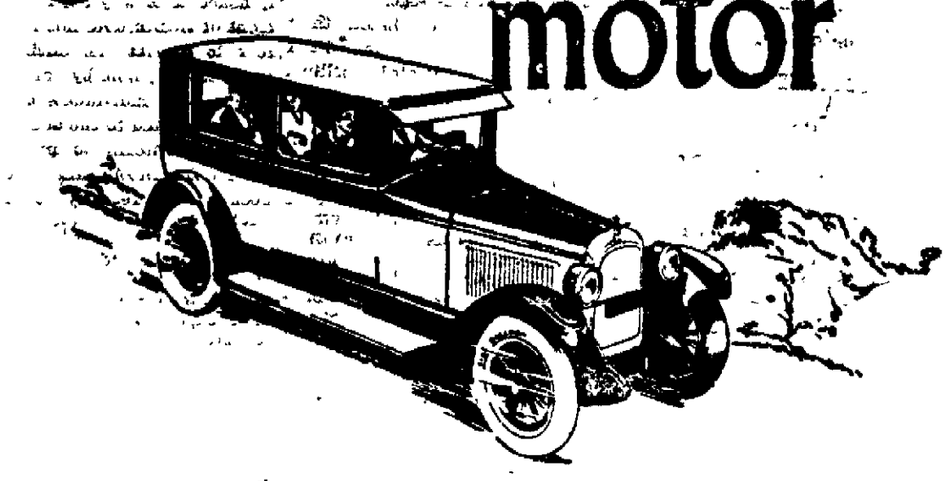

This somnambulant creature is employed by the owners of tea plantations in Ceylon as a watch dog, not because he is any good as a watchdog, but is the best they have. Just why the tramount is always tired and wants to rest or sleep is not definitely known, although it is supposed that the effort of carrying around his front legs has something to do with it. This is another of a long list of creatures, well known as to name, but comparative unknown otherwise, that are being investigated by the American Museum of Nutty Natural History.

As shown above, the head and body of this tramount about to doze off are large filberts, and the nose is a popcorn and the ears are split almonds. The tail is a section of spaghetti, the legs are toothpicks, and the feet are split lima beans.

The Fox or Animal Scarf Is Helpful in Weaning Us Away From Fur, Used as a Trimming Even for Spring.

When the time eventually comes for fur coats to be laid aside, the average woman likes to have either a fur collared coat or a fur neckpiece to tide her over the vagaries of spring and autumn. Although abroad women wear mink stoles, wrapping them about their throats, much as one would a silk scarf, Americans remain loyal to animal scarfs, particularly to fox. Silver fox is still the most elegant member of the fox family and has, thanks to a greater number of farms scattered throughout the country, come down some in price. Cross fox is another species which has appeal to a woman who likes her foxes to be slightly grayed, and cross fox has also a flattering tinge of red.

An Ensemble of Natural Kasha has a Jumper Frock and Full-length Coat flared from the shoulder. A deep border of dark blue leather in battlement design trims the coat, while dark blue satin, similarly patterned, appears on the Frock.

It is a fad, one hesitates in calling it a fashion, to dye foxes rainbow hues, but there is nothing staple about such a practice and the average woman buys furs for service as well as chic. Red fox is a quite different matter, being a natural fur, but the peach, and chartreuse and purple furs one sees are interesting of course but not to be taken too seriously. One might expect such things to be the vogue at Palm Beach, but as a matter of fact they were not, even white foxes being rather more unimportant than usual. The smartest women there avoided fur this winter excepting on evening wraps and then their preference was for dark furs.

The strictly tailored girl, affecting a short, perhaps double breasted suit, may prefer to do without furs, and for suburban wear, though hardly in town, affect a gay silk kerchief. One modiste has introduced a very smart choker scarf, made of wide taffeta gayly striped and cut on the bias, which gives a dash and difference to it, which is to be applauded, the scarf usually being knotted or bowed on the left side. Plaids of course are also smart this spring.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE GREAT PAGEANT

Such studying as went on for the examinations. Such learning of dates of battles, and names of generals and spelling of words and reviews of all they had studied.

The little Mothers and Daddies had their parents to hear them recite what they knew so as to be sure they wouldn't fail in their examinations.

They might pretend to each other that they hadn't studied and that they were sure they would fail, but they were, every single one of them, hoping for high marks.

They all did quite exceptionally well. The parents were proud of them. Examination marks counted for more than mere report cards.

The great pageant and exercises were to take place in the big assembly hall of the school, which was decorated in bunting and greens and flags and flowers for the event.

Of course the teacher was going to stand back of the curtain to prompt any who made mistakes in the pageant or in their pieces. But otherwise the children were going to be the only ones on the stage.

At last, after great excitement, when the parents, sitting down in the audience thought their hearts would soon be beating aloud like the measured beating of a drum, the curtain was pulled back.

It stuck at first and didn't seem to be willing to work, but in a few moments it was all right, and the performance began.

All the little Mothers and Daddies were assembled on the platform and sang the school song, and together recited their 'deals of their school.

How beautiful a sight it was!

The parents kept their eyes mostly on their own. How their own stood out as more wonderful than any others.

Then came the speaking of pieces and Daddy Fenwick was first on the program.

He got along beautifully, even though he didn't seem to know where to put his arms, but he finally seemed to realize he couldn't get rid of them, so before he had finished his recitation he had stopped moving his arms.

Just before the end of his poem he skipped a whole paragraph.

He stuttered a little and went back to the place where he had left off, but still he couldn't remember. So he simply bowed and stopped.

Everyone clapped as though there hadn't been any mistake, and while everyone had heard the teacher trying to prompt him, and had heard him stutter and fumble, they didn't mind a small part left out.

Prizes Were Given.

He had remembered most of it, after all.

Little Mother Fenwick played so well. She made only three mistakes, and they weren't so very bad.

All the others did well, too. The pageant was really quite remarkable. As many parents said:

"They couldn't have acted better on the stage than our little ones did."

Oh, how proud the parents were. It seemed as though they would burst with pride.

Prizes were given, high marks were read out. Everyone was good at something. It was one of the happiest days Reven-Saw had ever known.

How pleased, too, were the little Mothers and Daddies that they had so delighted their Parents and that their Parents were willing to praise them over and over again.

For this was in Reven-Saw, where the Parents and children had changed places for a time!

Marion Finds an Alibi

Marion's aunt, who was visiting the family, was teasing the child to go home with her so that she might see her uncle.

At first Marion was anxious to go, but hesitated when she happened to think how homesick she might get away from her parents.

"I'd like to go," she said, "but you see my folks would be left alone, and they'd find it awfully lonesome without me around the house."

No Artist!

Six-year-old Marjorie showed her mother the likeness of a baby which she had just fashioned from paper with her scissors.

Pleased with the newly discovered skill of her daughter, the mother praised her with enthusiasm: "Why, that is a perfect baby! I believe you are an artist!" she said.

"Huh," replied Marjorie, bends on her hips and head thrown back, "I think I'm a snark."

"And what," asked the prospective father-in-law, "do you expect to do for my daughter in the future?"

150 YEARS AGO

The Origin of the U. S. A.

By Jonathan A. Rawson, Jr.

THE BRITISH FLEET SAILS.

Boston, March 27, 1776.—General Washington and the officers of the Continental army have received information from look-outs who have been posted upon the head-lands that the British ministerial fleet, which has been at anchor off Nantasket Road for ten days, got under way this evening and is standing out for sea, with Halifax as its probable destination. The general has been much perplexed by the ten-day sojourn of the enemy fleet at Nantasket. Only two days ago he wrote to Colonel Joseph Reed: "The enemy have the best knack at puzzling people I ever met within my lif * * * What they are doing, the Lord knows. Various are the conjectures."

The conjecture which finally prevails is that the ministerial troops embarked so hastily after realizing the extent of the general's fortifications that, after tumbling aboard ship in any way they could, they required at least a week to store away their cargoes, and put their ships in seagoing condition. A deserter from one of the King's transports, who in some mysterious way got back to Boston, said that only two days ago many of the ships had yet their yards, booms and bowsprits to fix.

But the one thing that counts tonight is that they are gone, greatly to the relief of the commander-in-chief. He, the moment their going was assured, immediately gave his chief attention to the movement of his forces to New York. Brigadier General Heath left several days ago with the first brigade. A second brigade of six regiments will be immediately detached for New York under Brigadier General Sullivan, to be followed in a day or two by a third, and then as soon as possible by a fourth. Four or five regiments will be left here for taking care of the barracks and public stores and fortifying the town. When all these dispositions are made the general will proceed to New York with the headquarters organization. The entire movement will be executed as speedily as possible, leaving only a convenient space between the marching of the divisions to prevent confusion and want of accommodation upon their march. The general estimates that each division will require from eight to ten days for its journey.

Major-General Putnam is to assume command in New York and execute the plan proposed by Major-General Lee for fortifying that city and securing the passes of the East and North rivers.

PADEREWSKI GREAT FRIEND OF LEGION

"The American Legion has no greater friend than Ignace Jan Paderewski," declared John R. McQuigg, national commander of the Legion, recently in pointing out the unusual efforts made by the aging master of the piano in behalf of the Legion's $5,000,000 endowment fund for disabled veterans and orphans of the World war.

The largest individual gift to date to the Legion's endowment fund, $28,487.67, was made by Paderewski. The gift represented the receipts from a series of four concerts at New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Washington. Not only did Paderewski give the entire proceeds of the concerts to the fund, but he also defrayed all the expenses of himself and his large staff.

When President Coolidge, honorary chairman of the Legion's endowment fund, was informed of Paderewski's generous gifts to the fund, he wrote to Commander McQuigg:

"I am extremely gratified that the Paderewski concerts added so materially to the Legion endowment fund, and the thanks of all those interested in this fine cause are due to the pianist and to those who had the matter in charge."

In appreciation of Paderewski's efforts for the endowment fund and in recognition of his distinguished World war record generally, the Legion extended him a special tribute when he appeared in concert recently at Indianapolis, where national headquarters of the Legion is located. When the great Pole arrived at the concert hall he was met at the stage entrance by a Legion committee representing Commander McQuigg. Color bearers stood at either side of the entrance bearing the national and Legion colors. The Legion committee occupied a box suitably decorated. Following the concert a floral tribute in behalf of nearly a million Legionnaires was presented.

Following the concert, the Legion expressed to Paderewski the Legion's appreciation for what he had done for the disabled and the orphans of the war. Mr. Paderewski replied:

"I want to express my thanks to the Legion for having been permitted in my small way to show my appreciation for what American soldiers did for honor and service and love of liberty. For you fought not for the Stars and Stripes only, but for the Polish eagle."

Legionnaires Take Jobs of Illinois Policemen

When a large part of the police force of La Grange, Ill., went on strike recently in sympathy with a chief of police who resigned, it seemed that the town would be unprotected until the American Legion came to its rescue.

The trustees of the village met in special session and issued a call for volunteers. Col. W. M. Curtis, commander of the local American Legion post, responded.

Within a few minutes he had a force of twenty-five Legionnaires on the streets to portect the village from any criminals that might take advantage of an unpoliced city.

"The American Legion responded nobly in this crisis," Trustee W. M. Galvin said. "Within a few minutes after part of the police force quit we had Legionnaires patrolling the streets and they stuck to their beats until regular officers could be sworn in."

Son Killed in War; Impostor Is Detected

Rev. and Mrs. Charles Frazier of South Dakota have apparently at last accepted the finding of a federal jury that their son, Arthur, was killed in the World war and buried in a Nebraska cemetery. Through a long controversy they maintained their belief that a man claiming to be their son was really Arthur, even after the jury found that he was an impostor. Advices reaching Minnesota Legionnaires indicate that the couple have applied for federal and state bonuses as beneficiaries of Arthur.

Arithmetic

A benevolent old gentleman (isn't it the darndest how they always crop up in a story?) noticed a small boy burst into tears after he had dropped a dime down a grating.

"Never mind, little man," he comforted. "I'll give you another dime."

"But then," wailed the youngster, bursting into a fresh spasm, "I'd have had twenty cents if I hadn't lost one Wanawahoo!"—American Legion Weekly.

Supplied

Noticing a pretty new face in his congregation, the minister was bound to display a cordial interest.

"We are pleased to have you here," he told her politely. "If you will give me your name and address I shall be happy to call."

"Not it, doc," retorted the flapper, smartly. "I've got a sheik."—American Legion Weekly.

This popular "movie" star was born in San Francisco. He is the son of a police chief, and has lead an extremely active life, starring on many Santa Clara university teams. From assistant cameraman and "extra," he rose to star in a prominent screen picture. He is twenty-five, and is noted for his smile and good looks. He is a six-footer and weighs 175 pounds.

AN ABBREVIATED STORY

PHRENOLOGY

WANDERING about viewing the sights of the Round Corners county fair, Steuben Veskitt noticed the booth of Professor Kismet, phrenologist.

"Here's my chance to find out if there's really anything in the science of phrenology," he thought. And he went into the booth and requested Professor Kismit to feel his bumps.

"H'mn," began the professor, "your stabilistic curve is almost concave—that means that your will power is not only null, but void. Your attic protuberance is negligible—which indicates that your art sense is almost absent, that no one who knows you well would trust you to pick out wall paper for them. Fifty cents, please."

"If you expect half a dollar for that, you can keep on expecting till you're black in the face," hissed Steuben.

"Oh, well, let me be fair," he thought. "Professor Kismet may be a mere charlatan, and I wouldn't like to think that I ever condemned a thing hastily."

And he went in and uncovered his head for Madame Swastika, who began: "You have an unusually prolific jollitific accilvity, which indicates that you are good nature itself. Furthermore, your upstanding pinnacles are supernormal, showing that you are the soul of honor and the acme of justice. You are an almost infallible judge of human nature and are generally known as a prince of good fellows. Five dollars, please."

"With pleasure," said Steuben Veskitt, handing it over. "You have proven to me that phrenology is based on sound scientific principles."

And, bowing himself out, he went and lost eighteen dollars playing the shell game.

WHO SAID

"When I am at Rome I fast as the Romans do: when I am at Milan, I do not fast."

THESE are the words of advice given to St. Austin by St. Ambrose, one of the fathers of the early Christian church. St. Ambrose's advice was, in effect, that his co-worker should enter a middle course and give no unnecessary offense which might lessen his influence among the people with whom he was working. Continuing his advice, he said:

"So likewise you, whatever church you come to, observe the custom of the place, if you would neither give offense to others, nor take offense from them."

When one considers the age in which St. Ambrose lived his attitude was, indeed, tolerant and savored little of the spirit of asceticism which made many people of that day the torturers of their fellowmen who did not agree with their opinions.

St. Ambrose did not set out to be a priest. He was the son of an office holder at Treves, and as a young man he studied for the law in Rome. He practiced law at Milan and was at one time governor of north Italy. His kindness and wisdom in handling the affairs of the province under his administration so endeared him to the people that they unanimously called him to be bishop of Milan, though he had not yet been baptized into the church. He withheld acceptance of the office for a time but finally yielded and set himself in strong opposition to the Arians—a sect which denied the equal sovereignty of God and Jesus Christ.

Many religious works are extant which are from the pen of this man. St. Ambrose died in the year 397, aged about sixty-four years.—Wayne D. McMurray.

Another Diplomat

Five-year-old William, the son of religious parents, has been taught that Sunday is not a day for play. One Sunday his mother was surprised and horrified to find him sailing his toy boat in the bathtub.

"William!" she exclaimed. "Don't you know it's wicked to sail boats on Sunday?"

"Now don't get excited, mother," was the calm reply. "This isn't any pleasure excursion. This is a missionary boat going to darkest Africa."—The Open Road.

The local club has obtained Joe McDermott, who formerly played second base for Coxsackie. McDermott hung up a very good record while he was with the upstate club, both at bat and on the bag. It is not known just what position he will hold down for the locals but he will fill in on one of the sacks.

The local management has been kept very busy lately receiving many offers for games.

It is not known yet whether the local club will play road or home games. If they play home games they will bring the very best semi-pro clubs to this city.

Demands Pitcher From Pirates

San Francisco Demands Right Hand Pitcher From Pittsburgh Pirates Arising Out of Waner and Rhyne Deal.

By Davis J. Walsh.

New York, March 27.—According to advices from San Francisco, arriving today, the Pittsburgh Pirates find themselves in the peculiar position of enjoying the daily society of Paul Waner and Hal Rhyne, human luxuries to the value of $95,000, without having paid for them, at least not in players-on-the-flat-foot. It isn't that the Pirates wish to take a hurried run-out on the transaction or that their money is all tied up in amalgamated eye shades. I presume their cash obligations on the deal have been met these many months.

Ever since the big deal was closed during the last world's series, they have been willing to play ball with the Seals on the proposition but the other big league clubs refuse to stand pitched.

First, the Pirates tried to send Eddie Moore, second baseman, and Carson Bigbee, extra outfielder, to San Francisco. This afterward was denied by Barney Dreyfuss but I seem to remember that his denial came after several rival clubs declined to waive on the young men. For once, it appeared, the so called "gentlemen's agreement" between major league club owners came to a test at a most unfortunate moment. Some one had just thrown the book of etiquette out of the window and besides he had no time for fiction anyhow.

Whatever the answer may have been, Moore and Bigbee still are in the National League and the former, judging from the demand for infielders, is likely to remain indefinitely. The last word on the deal is that the Pirates will not make delivery until after the opening of the major league season, when ball clubs are disposed to view one another's moves with less suspicion.

Meantime, the Seals seem to have altered the character of their needs. It is said that they have demanded a right hand pitcher from the Pirates and that the latter would have none of it. Aldridge, Kremer, Meadows, Morrison, Adams, Culloton and Sheehan are the right handers of consequence listed on the Pirate roster.

You can throw the first four out of the deal without looking and Adams is a ten-year man; therefore, not open to argument. This leaves Sheehan and Culloton to play around with and you can take your choice.

The only other acceptable candidates for the coast trip, in addition to those mentioned, are Johnny Rawlings and Eddie Hock, once with the Reds. It might be possible to get Rawlings out of the league depending on how well or ill he recovered from a late season injury in 1925.

Another Giant Casualty.

Tampa, Fla., March 27.—Another Giant casualty was listed today when McGraw's outfit arrived for another game of their series with the Washington Senators today. The hospital case was furnished by Hack McQuillan first string pitcher who sprained his ankle in practice game yesterday. Art Nehf, the team's leading left-hander, has been out with a broken finger since the start of the training season.

Wonders of World

The seven wonders of the ancient world were the pyramids of Egypt, the hanging gardens of Babylon, the temple of Diana at Ephesus, the statue of Jupiter in Greece, the tomb of Mausolus at Halicarnassus, the pharos of Alexander and the colossus of Rhodes.

BASEBALL GAINING HOLD ON BRITAIN

Becoming Popular in Liverpool and Newport.

Baseball at last appears to have taken a firm hold in certain sections of Great Britain, and the past season saw more progress than ever before, according to comments by London sporting authorities and writers. Especially has great progress during the past year been noted in Liverpool and south Wales.

Most of the baseball clubs in south Wales are to be found in the thickly populated districts, and Cardiff has become the real stronghold of the game. The progress it has made in the Welsh metropolis is largely attributable to the fact that during the war the United States authorities had a large depot in the city. It is held that the game is more exciting than cricket and that a decision is arrived at in far less time than in the case of the older game.

Certain it is that the athletes of south Wales and of Cardiff and Newport in particular, have seized on baseball as the best substitute for football during the off season of the great winter game. Cardiff supports four baseball leagues, one of which is a women's league. Exponents of the game invariably play their matches on pitches in the public parks. A number of the cricket clubs have inclosed grounds and are able to charge admission. It is no uncommon thing, according to one London critic, to see crowds of from 3,000 to 5,000 watching a baseball game in Cardiff.

Newport also has its thousands of enthusiasts and claims credit for being the pioneer of the American game in south Wales. There were strong teams in the Uskside town long before the war. In south Wales football players consider baseball a better game for keeping themselves in condition during the summer than cricket and it is thought probable that their participation in baseball has materially increased its popularity.

In Liverpool the view also is taken that the game is far faster than cricket and workers are being lured in increasing numbers to baseball parks on Saturday afternoons. For years Liverpool has been almost alone among the centers of the north in its adherence to the game, but new clubs are springing up in the surrounding districts of St. Helens, Prescott and the Wirral.

Yale's Swim Star

Cricket Fans Disturbed Over Lively Ball Hint

Quite a flurry has been caused in Australian cricket circles since Mailey raised the question of lifting the seam of the ball, with the result that a lively discussion has arisen as to the advisability of definitely establishing a rule against artificial aids that are likely to give an advantage to a bowler to which he is not considered entitled. Bob Crockett, who has umpired the test and other big matches for 32 years, and who is regarded as the greatest authority on Australian cricket, when interviewed on the subject, is quoted as saying:

"I cannot understand what all the discussion is about. I have not seen one bowler lift a seam during the past 15 years, and I am always on the lookout for such things. Mailey certainly did not do it. His trouble is that he gets too much break on the ball.

"Bowlers nowadays are more anxious to keep the ball smooth than make it rough. Douglas often rubbed the ball on his arm to make it smooth. Nearly all the bowlers used resin, which they keep in their pockets, and against which there is no rule. Few of the present-day bowlers rub the ball on the ground. Formerly bowlers, particularly Noble, liked the ball a little rough, but the custom has died out. One thing, despite its legitimacy, which annoyed bowlers, was the sticky mixture wicket-keepers used on their gloves. That was much more useful to a wicket-keeper than resin to a bowler."

Henry Toll on Forests

The railroads use about 130,000,000 new wood ties every year. There are 3,000 ties under every mile of track. Each tie ordinarily lasts an average of eight years. It is necessary to cut 3,000,000 trees every year to maintain telephone and telegraph wires.

Will those who are in arrears in their pledges be kind enough to send their contributions.

Last Sunday was to have been the day for the annual Every Member Canvass. It was found a considerable number of the canvassers were ill and unable to go out. As all contributors have received the pledge cards, it is requested that you will send in or bring your pledge to the church. Quite a number have already been received in this way. There will be no special services conducted during the Passion week this year by the pastor as has been his practice during the last three years.

Held Mandrake Gifted With Peculiar Power

Mandrake, known to present day botanists as an anesthetic and narcotic, since Biblical times has been supposed to have powers of love and fertility, but during the Seventeenth century its activity as a love agent was "exploded" by the spirit of investigation," according to a journal of 1653. However, we find that the mystery and superstition of the drug still exist. According to Frederick Starr, an American writer, a wealthy Jew of Chicago who was interested in the return of the Jews to Palestine and who contributed generously to the cause, mourned the fact that he had no child to perpetuate his line. The Jews of Palestine, knowing of his family sorrow and appreciative of sympathy, sent him a mandrake with their best wishes.

Tales concerning the plant are numerous. The root, that looks much like a parsnip, resembles the human form in shape. The fruit varies in size from that of a nutmeg to a small apple. These "apples" were gathered in the gardens of Aphrodite, the goddess of love, according to mythology. The mandrake, according to an old legend, never was found growing except under the site of a gallows, from which it was nourished by the blood of the victim, particularly an innocent victim.

The Syrians would not touch the herb until certain ceremonies had been poured upon it, after which the ground was loosened and a dog tied to the root. The dog was then left alone, and in its struggle to escape the plant was torn from the ground, killing the dog by the frightful screams coming from its root. In return for its capture the plant was thought to have power to cure diseases, frighten away demons and act as a love potion.—Missouri Botanical Garden Bulletin.

Fire Preserves Fruit

A new process for preserving fruit, vegetables and kindred things makes use of a system similar to that adapted for exhausting wireless valves. According to recent research the main cause of decay in perishable goods packed in tins is the presence of oxygen, and the object of the new process is to remove the oxygen. The following is a brief resume of the process:

The fruit is placed in the metal container, over which is placed a metal cover. A piece of wood impregnated with a special solution is next placed over the shield and ignited, and when conflagration is well developed the container is hermetically sealed.

This process results in carbon dioxide (CO_2) being left in place of the oxygen. The food is preserved for much greater periods, without admixture of chemical preservatives.

Built House in Treetop

In a treetop near Mequon, N. J., an enterprising man built himself a house five years ago. There he has dwelt, rent free—now he must abandon his primitive abode. The tree stands in a lonely spot near the beach. The city is planning to extend an avenue and the tree, in the way, must come down. The tenant must look for another tree or his himself to a boarding house or apartment. The tree man is employed by the street department. Five years ago he became enthusiastic over outdoor life. He built a frame structure in the tree, 5 feet wide, 7 feet long and 5 feet high. It is 12 feet above the ground and supported by sturdy branches. On both sides are openings just large enough for a man to crawl through. He reaches his nest by means of a ladder.

The Actor

Consider the life of a photoplay actor—now he is here and now nowhere.

There are millions to gasp at the twitch of his eyebrow—there's no more than to call him a pit-throwing highbrow.

He sails for France amid kisses and geysers—he rides the shoulders of princes and viziers.

From Reno suits on Fifth he disdainfully scans us—his autographed photographs clutter up Kansas.

Newspaper writers deny that he means well—they certainly have to admit that he screens well.

The road to success has its twists and strictures—but it's certainly grand to be famed for your pictures.—The New Yorker.

Not a Tutor

Billy, age five, lives at Muncie with his Aunt Dora.

Billy has a habit of playing in the water, and recently she was scolding him for the misdemeanor. He kept on persisting the icy water from the spout to trickle over his hands.

"Gee, this is cold as devil," he said nonchalantly as his aunt attempted to pull him away.

"What's that you say?" inquired his aunt.

"Learn it for yourself," Billy replied as he hurried away from the angry lecturer.—Indianapolis News.

Valuable Talk On Landscape

On Friday evening, Prof. J. P. Porter of Cornell University, gave a valuable and interesting lecture on landscape gardening illustrated with fine lantern slides at Epworth Hall, under the auspices of the Ulster Home Bureau. Fully half of the good-sized audience was composed of teachers and school superintendents from the rural and city districts. Miss Nance of the Home Bureau introduced the speakers of the evening—for Duncan Rankin of Hudson, from the U. S. Department of Agriculture also spoke.

In fact Mr. Rankin was the first speaker whose subject was the "White Pine Blister Rust," and Reforestration. He gave some very informing statistics showing the imperative need of reforestration especially in the Eastern States and also told just how this reforestration work can be done, what helps the state has to offer etc. Moreover, particularly in the rural districts, both men and women may engage in the work. Then Mr. Rankin explained how the white pine blister starts with the pines and through spores is propagated on the currant and gooseberry bushes and then carried back to the pines and finally described the control of this scourge. He closed with a plea for the education of our youngsters along lines of forest conservation and the prevention of fires, insects and fungi that are so destructive.

Prof. Porter, who had a large number of beautiful, helpful and interesting lantern slides, most of them colored, gave a talk on landscape gardening that was both ideal and practical for either homes—city or country—and schools, large and pretentious or the one-room rural variety. He prefaced his remarks on the stated subject by telling how he came to be a specialist in landscape architecture. As a boy in school he was an admitted problem until living in New Rochelle, he became acquainted with Mrs. J. E. Van Etten formerly of Kingston, chairman of the Ninth District Branch of the Federation of Women's Clubs, who helped him to become interested in tree planting, so that as a little lad he planted some of the first trees in the first community nursery in this state. From that his interest had grown until his education and interest found him doing the work he is now carrying on so successfully and entertainingly.

He showed good and bad arrangements of landscape gardening about homes and schools and in the many variations of scene whether summer bloom and foliage or winter grouping and coloring, etc.

A few simple rules were given showing the right way to do things, and many plants native to our own county were pictured showing their artistic possibilities when used to beautify our homes or schools, as the seed-beds where we should be cultivating the finest product of all—our children, the future citizens of this great land.

GOOD SUGGESTIONS

A baked apple is enjoyed at any meal. The manner of serving it may be varied so that it never becomes commonplace.

Apples Stuffed With Nuts and Raisins. — Core five apples, being sure to remove all of the core. Put half of a cupful of sugar and the same of water into a saucepan, into this set the apples to cook, turning often until each apple is tender but shapely. Set them carefully into a baking pan. Fill the centers with one-third of a cupful each of raisins and nuts chopped fine, add a little sugar and bake in a moderate oven until well glazed. Serve with the sirup poured around them.

Children are far more restricted in their diet than grown-ups, and they are more dependent upon special foods. It is necessary that we all have a diet so balanced that it will produce the highest efficiency, but the food for a growing child must do more than that. The child is building new flesh and bone, and for this reason should be furnished with a larger proportion of body-building foods than adults.

Milk is the most important of foods; it is the ideal food for the child for it contains the elements needed to promote growth—with one exception—iron. This element is given the child in spinach, beets, greens, carrots.

Eggs, butter, cereals served with top milk are very important foods in the diet of a child.

We are told that no mother should buy a pound of meat for her family until she has purchased a quart of milk for each child.

As the child grows older and becomes more active, other foods are added, which supply energy. When milk is unpleasant to the child, give it to him in soups and custards and occasionally in cocoa. The older members of the family may be underrationed on milk, but never let the children want for it.

Out of Bounds

Diogenes, growing desperate, refilled his lamp and struck out for the great open spaces. After the third detour he encountered a man at a gate to whom he confided the secret of his search. "Sorry, my friend," the gateman told him, "but you're wasting your time here. This is the Babbling Brook Country club and we're holding our annual golf tournament for advertising men."

Saturn's Ring

The conclusion has been reached that the ring of Saturn is triple, consisting of concentric parts, and that it is composed of a very large number of small satellites. If the ring were solid some temporary disturbance would suffice to disrupt it, hence it is more reasonable to presume that it is liquid.

Originated Turkey Trot

Going back to the early Eighteenth century to show that every innovation in dancing has met with violent opposition, a writer in Liberty Magazine says that it was in 1912 that Mabel Hite, an actress, and Mike Donlin, a ball player turned vaudevillian, who was Mabel's husband, brought to Broadway the first turkey trot New York had ever seen. Right there decently ordered terpsichore expired.

Raven in Literature

Ravens hold a high place in folklore and in the real literature of many countries. From the beginning they have been thought uncanny, although, according to the English story it was the magpie and not the raven which was the only bird to refuse to accompany Noah into the ark. How it, or rather they, for there must have been a pair of them, survived the flood tradition does not tell.

Not All Gone

Judging from the boom in home building, there must be considerable home life in this country.

POULTRY

POULTRY HOUSE QUITE IMPORTANT

Chickens raised on grandfather's farm roosted in the apple tree or on the binder reel because these places were accessible, convenient and neither crowded nor stuffy. It is pointed out by W. A. Foster of the farm mechanics department, college of agriculture, University of Illinois. This choice of biddy's should be a valuable guide to the modern poultryman who is planning to build a new chicken house or remodel the old one, Foster says.

"Suitable housing is just as important as the care of the flock because it provides for the comfort of the birds at all seasons. Furthermore, it is convenient for the attendant. In addition, to be effective and efficient, the house should be simple in construction in order to keep the cost and upkeep low. A neat, attractive house adds to the appearance of the building group and value of the farm.

"The comfort of the birds is secured through freedom from dampness and drafts and provisions for ample floor space in feeding and roost space for night. An abundant supply of fresh air and sunlight promotes the health, vigor and comfort of the birds.

"A dry house requires a dry floor placed on a porous, well-drained site, a lead-proof roof, tight walls and close-fitted doors and windows. Proper ventilation supplies fresh air to the birds, removes the moisture from the breathed air and litter and minimizes drafts, which are disastrous to the flock when the birds are inactive on the roosts at night. This ventilation may be provided in several ways. The apple-tree roosts of a generation ago were well ventilated. The open machine shelter where the range flocks like to roost is also well ventilated. Biddy's choice, then, may require a little thought on our part. Why did she choose a perch on the harvester's reel? It was accessible, convenient and neither crowded nor stuffy as many roosts in the modern hen house

"Open-front houses provide ventilation and sunlight, but must be used with common sense to avoid undesirable drafts. A southern exposure is desirable. Modern ventilation equipment has advanced many steps in recent years. It is not yet fool-proof, but will require further study and intelligent handling.

"A poultry house of simple construction is not only desirable but necessary to the success of the venture. Simple construction enables the attendant to build houses and install equipment which would be prohibitive if skilled labor was employed.

"A neat, attractive, well-kept poultry house surrounded by a healthy, vigorous flock should be the pride of every poultry raiser. It is not only encouraging to the owner but an asset in marketing the products."

Milk Powder Remedy for Little Chick Diseases

Milk powder is the remedy for the disease of coccidiosis, which for years has taken its annual toll of baby chicks, according to the results of experimental work conducted at the California agricultural experiment station. The results of the investigation recommend the feeding or a ration to baby chicks which contains 40 per cent of dry skim milk. The investigators say: "The fact that feeding chickens mash containing 40 per cent dry skim milk not only protected them against coccidial infection but also stimulated rapid growth, indicates that this would be a valuable practice in the prevention and control of outbreaks of the disease on poultry farms."

Two pens of chicks fed in the experiment were inoculated with the germ of coccidiosis. Of those which did not get dry milk in their mash 23.8 per cent died. Of those which did get dry milk only 2.3 per cent died.

It was found that chicks fed powdered dry milk produced 25 per cent faster growth than those which were not so fed.

Poultry Facts

It is much easier to keep hens healthy and happy than it is to "doctor" sick birds.

* * *

Chicks hatched early this spring will start laying in the fall and make good producers by winter.

* * *

Clean, fluffy hen feathers, well dried, make fine pillows and cushions; and, in fancy ticking, they might be sold.

* * *

By thoroughly disinfecting your incubator with a 5 per cent solution of creosote or carbolic acid, tubercular organisms can be destroyed, making incubation perfectly safe.

* * *

Sunlight and vitamines must be mixed in the ration fed to poultry these winter months if egg production is to keep up to normal.

* * *

Wheat or oats are rich in protein, but do not carry enough carbohydrates to balance up this most valuable of all the food elements

Incomplete rations are responsible for tremendous losses each year from failure of pullets to lay during the winter, and from heavy mortality to pullets, especially the following spring.

LAST NIGHT on THE RADIO

A high spot in the evening was the way CFCF performed, loud, clear and the best reception from any Canadian station in several months.

WOAI whispered faintly from San Antonio but other southern stations didn't even whisper.

A congress of bloopers drove those who were trying to get the Victor concert from WCY to WJZ, which distorted at times.

WOC, repeating the WEAF program, was clearer than and almost as loud as WEAF.

Among those present away down on the dial were WFKB, WBBM, WIBO, WOK, while higher up was KDKA almost as loud as before it got lost.

WWJ seems to have taken a new lease of life and was a better place [illegible] the WEAF program than was WEAF

Kansas City and Minneapolis were not bad.

There was no static and little local interference except from bloopers and the bloopers have been worse.

Strike for Happy Medium

Far be it from us to decry an aspect of hominess in a room. A room to be successful must have the appearance of being lived in, otherwise it will be the cold, impersonal showroom of the decorator. There is a happy medium, and it is this that the owner of good taste must strive for in furnishing and decorating his home.
